Prem Gangalakunta firmly believes that having access to foundational education and opportunity should be a fundamental right of every human. He works with several non-profit organizations that serve underprivileged communities in democratizing access to education, healthcare, and opportunity.

Professionally, he has been in leadership roles at leading software/technology companies for over two decades. He has a graduate degree in computer science from Texas Tech University. Prem is a community leader and helps in organizing events to bring awareness about the challenges of the less fortunate communities as well as celebrate ethnic cultures.

He was born in Anantapur, India, and spent the early part of his life there. He is well aware of the challenges in the drought-prone rural areas in India and is passionate about applying technology to address them. He currently lives in Dallas, TX with his wife and two children.
