BACKGROUND

The Vicente Ferrer Foundation USA (VFF USA) is empowering rural India to end the cycle of poverty. VFF USA focuses on marginalized people, especially women and people with disabilities in 4 major areas:

Health Equity

Education for Empowerment

Rural Infrastructure

Sustainable Agriculture

Despite India's economic growth in recent years and current status as one of the top emerging nations in the world, India is rife with contradictions and inequalities.

India is home to more poverty stricken people than the whole of sub-Saharan Africa with an estimated 360 million people surviving on less than $1 a day.

According to United Nations estimates, more than 49 per cent of women in India are poor.

In 2014, India ranked 130 out of 188 on the Gender Inequality Index.

Since the beginning, VFF global operations have used a collaborative approach that brings together the principles of solidarity, community, entrepreneurship and trust.

The communities impacted by the organization are not simply recipients of aid but partners of change.

MISSION

To eliminate poverty in rural India.

We work to empower the most marginalized members of society by removing the barriers and breaking the cycle of poverty.

THE VFF DIFFERENCE

Unlike other non-profit organizations, VFF USA champions empowerment with a holistic approach that supports our initiatives. We improve lives by working through transversal issues as problems are interconnected.

VICENTE FERRER FOUNDATION: OUR STORY

“My job is to achieve impossible dreams.”

- Vicente Ferrer

The Rural Development Trust - Vicente Ferrer Foundation was founded in 1969 by Anne and Vicente Ferrer. VFF USA partners with RDT - VFF in Andhra Pradesh, India.

A majority of the population relies upon agriculture for their livelihoods, and the severe drought in the area makes basic nutrition a daily struggle for the rural poor. RDT - VFF is working to eliminate discrimination.

RDT - VFF is changing lives by addressing the interconnected web of issues affecting every impoverished family: hunger, housing, healthcare, education, discrimination and sustainable farming. In this way, we are breaking the cycle of extreme poverty by empowering lives.

We're not asking for charity. We are seeking real solutions. We are seeking transformation.

Today, because one man dared to imagine the impossible, 3.6 million people have escaped extreme poverty and RDT - VFF continues this work in 3,600 villages.

WHERE?

SERVING 3.6 MILLION PEOPLE IN OVER 3,600 VILLAGES

VFF's efforts are focused within the Indian states of Andhra Pradesh and Telangana, in the southeastern part of India. Initially, VFF began working in the district of Anantapur, and for over 40 years efforts to add scale beyond Anantapur have helped provide support for more than 3,600 rural villages.

VFF USA SECTORS

Health Equity

People living in rural areas of India have limited access to healthcare facilities. Barriers like distance from home and costs make healthcare inaccessible to a majority of the population. To complicate the situation, the gender inequality inherent in certain social practices, such as early marriage, decreased healthcare for women, nutritional deficiencies and selective birth of male children, leaves women particularly vulnerable.

VFF hospitals have treated over 978,591 individuals, with a special focus on helping women. We support health infrastructure through:

- ▶ Three general hospitals with 626 beds in Bathalapalli, Kalyandurg and Kanekal.
- ▶ Specialized professionals in pediatrics, orthopedics, obstetrics and gynecology, infectious diseases, hospice care, outpatient services, emergency care, ambulance services, and a sliding scale pharmacy that combines both western and eastern technologies.
- ▶ 13 rural clinics provide healthcare to the most remote areas at Andhra Pradesh and Telangana.
- ▶ 73,000 people with HIV and TB receive anti-viral medications and continuous care.

Education for Empowerment

Forty years ago, elementary school enrollment was under 10% for boys and less than 5% for girls in impoverished tribal communities. For the past 35 years, VFF has worked to raise awareness about the importance of education as a basis for development, building the understanding that education is an inalienable right.

Today, 99% of children across 2,806 villages where VFF operates education programs are enrolled in elementary school and 70% are enrolled in high school. Additionally, thousands of youth have gained access to college scholarships for both technical and professional degree programs.

VFF has built over 80 public schools and provides scholarships and transportation for thousands of children each year.

VFF supports local government schools and communities to ensure:

- ▶ 1:1 equal access to primary education between boys and girls.
- ▶ More than 75% of students who begin pre-university and university studies graduate.
- ▶ 19,644 scholarships for youth to continue their studies in college.
- ▶ More than 90% of youth who received training at our Professional School found employment within three months

Rural Infrastructure

People in rural areas often live in huts built from materials like grass or mud, which stand up poorly to harsh weather and other environmental conditions. To make matters worse, these houses are frequently overcrowded; 45% of the people inhabiting rural areas in Andhra Pradesh live in one-room houses, even though most of them house up to three generations at once.

Families with the greatest need for improved housing receive support from community leaders to advocate for subsidized land from local government.

VFF helps to provide supplies for constructions and guides the process.

- ▶ 67,980 new homes built.
- ▶ 2,743 homes adapted for people with disabilities.
- ▶ 11,419 latrines built through our collaboration with local government in “Clean India” campaign.

Sustainable Agriculture

Throughout Andhra Pradesh and Telegana, low rainfall means drought is a constant threat. In rural areas where agriculture is the main source of income, people face high risk and low returns. Maintaining agricultural production is difficult in this region due to several factors, including outdated agricultural practices, degraded soils and lack of moisture conservation measures.

In 1987, VFF implemented an environmental sustainability plan to ensure the future of the families in the region, by raising public awareness about eco-regeneration.

Our programs have improved agricultural production for thousands of families:

- ▶ More than 31,181 hectares of farming land with access to a well and irrigation systems installed.
- ▶ More than 8,4 million fruit trees distributed to farmers to diversify their crops.
- ▶ 7,658,200 trees planted to prevent erosions and increase the capacity of the land to absorb water.
- ▶ More than 3,000 water storage structures constructed to retain the monsoon rains and support local farming irrigation systems.

Women's development

Though women represent 48 percent of the Indian population, they are disproportionately poor and disadvantaged in comparison to men. Gender discrimination deprives them of taking control of their own lives, health, and means of income. In the most impoverished rural communities, women suffer extreme discrimination on account of their gender and low caste.

Since 1982, VFF is working hand in hand with communities to empower women, striving to demonstrate their capacity to support each other and their community through a variety of programs.

VFF programs support 6 vocational training centers, 4 counseling centers, and a robust income generation program through the Women's Empowerment Initiative.

- ▶ Approximately 111,657 women participate in an association.
- ▶ More than 12,284 women have received technical job skill training and started their small business.
- ▶ 8,500 women attend counseling and support centers.
- ▶ 114,236 safe births have taken place in VFF hospitals.

People with disabilities

Official estimates in India report around 2% of the population with a disability, although other reports suggest a much higher number. Unfortunately, they are still not fully recognized within the family or society. Family members, feeling ashamed, often keep people with disabilities shut away inside the home, limiting their exposure to the community.

VFF supports people with disabilities by developing community self-help groups for people to share their challenges and work together for a more inclusive community.

VFF helps to address rehabilitation and medical service needs for the community, operates schools for the visually and hearing impaired, and provides access to schools for people with other physical and intellectual disabilities.

- ▶ VFF programs have brought better quality of life to more than 32,000 people with disabilities in India.
- ▶ More than 2,631 children with intellectual, hearing, visual impairment and cerebral palsy treated in 17 residential centers.
- ▶ More than 31,000 people with disabilities have received small loans to develop their own businesses.
- ▶ Hundreds of youth with intellectual disabilities have competed in the Special Olympics.
- ▶ More than 2,000 orthopedic surgeries to support physical disabilities performed.
- ▶ More than 450 women trained in the fair trade and equal opportunity workshops.

FOUNDERS

VICENTE FERRER

Co - Founder / President (April 9, 1920 - June 19, 2009)

When Vicente Ferrer first landed in Mumbai, India, in 1952 he immediately felt connected to the plight of rural farmers, and resolved to make it his life's mission to support hope, opportunity, and an end to poverty.

In 1969, with the support of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, he returned to India and established the (Rural Development Trust (Now, VFF-RDT) in Anantapur. In 1970, he married his wife, Anne, a journalist who shared his resolve to bring to light the suffering of rural India that had for too long been kept in the dark.

The couple faced huge challenges in those early days. Located in one of the driest regions in India, Andhra Pradesh barely supported its inhabitants. For the rural poor, just getting basic nutrition was a daily struggle, not to mention the challenges caused by extreme discrimination in a society deeply divided along caste, tribal, and gender lines.

Vicente and Anne got started by helping the district's poorest families find work and gain access to food. They paid special attention to the most marginalized communities, including people with disabilities, and women. Over the years, their efforts have touched millions of lives, and have now supports 3,589 villages across Andhra Pradesh and Telangana.

ANNE FERRER

Co - Founder / President

Her adventurous spirit inspired her to join her brother and depart on the long journey over land from her native England to India at the age of 16. Upon arrival Anne felt an immediate connection to the women fighting for equality. She completed her studies in India and after graduation she began working as a reporter for the news magazine, "Current".

During her work she met Vicente Ferrer to interview him for an article and joined the movement to support his return to India. They traveled together to build VFF-RDT in Anantapur, and married in 1970.

Anne Ferrer is currently the Executive Director of the Rural Development Trust - Vicente Ferrer in India. She is dedicated to establishing a strategic vision for the organization and coordinate the management team that oversees the organization's numerous projects.

EXECUTIVES

MONCHO FERRER

President of the Board

Moncho Ferrer, born in India, holds a degree in international relations from the University of Keele. After finishing his studies, he returned to India to work on the Rural Infrastructure Project in Anantapur to support the legacy of his parents Vicente and Anna Ferrer — the founders of the Vicente Ferrer Foundation.

He became the Associate Program Manager in 2002 and alongside his mother has led the strategic vision as director of programs since his father’s death in 2009.

Through his work with the Vicente Ferrer Foundation, Moncho has spearheaded the “India for India” initiative to mobilize Indian citizens and institutions to fight poverty and marginalization, led humanitarian aid operations throughout India, launched innovative and inclusive sports programs for disadvantaged communities, and built strong linkages with community partners ranging from grassroots to governmental organizations.

As shown through his efforts and accomplishments, Moncho whole-heartedly believes in the power of local community members to make change.

ANGELINA KLOUTHIS

Executive Director

Angelina Klouthis is the executive director of VFF USA, where she guides strategic partnerships through her belief in harnessing the market’s power to drive philanthropy from “spare change to real change.” With over a decade of development experience, Angelina has worked directly with over 40 organizations in the use of social media as a fundraising tool, grant writing, performance measures, transparency, sustainability, and community organization. Throughout her career, she has managed programs on a governmental level with the U.S. Agency for International Development, the U.S. State Department, the Colombian Ministry of Labor, and a diverse portfolio of private foundations and businesses.

She has also designed and implemented training programs for grassroots organizations in Colombia, Niger, Haiti, Nicaragua, Cameroon, and most recently India. Before joining the Vicente Ferrer Foundation, Angelina served the Office of Multicultural Affairs in the Refugee Program for the State of Maine. She has a degree in international relations from Florida International University, and a master’s degree in Organizations, Social Responsibility, and International Development.
